MAY 18 IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

ICCF HOSTS PRESIDENT OF COLOMBIA AT UNITED STATES CAPITOL

On May 18, ICCF hosted a luncheon with the President of the Republic of Colombia, Juan Manuel Santos, and a bipartisan group of Members of the United States Congress, including leaders of the U.S. Congressional International Conservation Caucus (ICC).

President Santos discussed recent conservation successes in his country, such as creation of a Ministry of Environment; challenges, such as environmental damage due to armed conflict; and areas of focus, such as restoration and protection of coral reefs and forests.

ICCF Colombia supported the development of the Colombian Conservation Caucus (CCC) and continues to work closely with the caucus on areas such as water and mining. We share a belief that conservation should reinforce development, and we are working with Colombia’s policymakers to address issues that are essential to conservation as well as to Colombia’s economy and security.
Members of the Namibian Conservation Parliamentary Caucus (NACOPAC) met with key Ministry of Environment officials to prioritize near-term conservation governance actions. MPs committed to collaborating with Ministry officials on enhancing laws and policies and engaging stakeholders in the corporate and NGO sectors to address challenges in wildlife and marine resources management.

NACOPAC set an agenda for improving the value of wildlife resources for communities by mitigating human-wildlife conflict, combating wildlife trafficking, and supporting the community-based conservancy model. The MPs also committed to tackling the growing phenomenon of illegal, unregulated, and often unreported fishing in its marine territory.

CONSERVATION CAUCUS LAUNCHED IN PERU

Under the leadership of the President of the Committee on Andean, Amazon, and Afroperuvian Peoples, Environment and Ecology and the Vice President of Natural Resources, the Peruvian Conservation Caucus (CCP) was officially inaugurated in the Peruvian Congress.

Representatives underlined the importance of the creation of multi-partisan dialogue at the highest levels of government to generate, in a conscientious and informed manner, legislation on sustainable development and conservation of natural capital.

The CCP will coordinate activities promoting cross-sectoral forums to encourage parliamentary work on issues such as responsible mining, water resources, reforestation, biodiversity, and protected areas, among others.
Members of the Colombian Conservation Caucus (CCC), ICCF Colombia, the Center for Higher Legislative Learning (CAEL), and the Senate Board officially launched the Colombian Oceans Caucus (COC) to promote a cross-sectional agenda on sustainable conservation and development of marine resources, working on the promotion, support, and creation of well-informed policies and legislation.

ICCF Colombia serves as secretariat for the COC and is creating platforms for cross-sectoral dialogue and collaborative agreement.

In June, the COC carried out its first Congressional Field Mission to Tayrona National Park. Primary objectives were to discuss the preservation of the region’s natural wealth, better understand its contribution to the country’s socio-economic development, and address the challenges it faces.

Members recognized the need for institutional development for the administrative and management agencies in charge of the region.

“As a congressional representative of the Colombian Caribbean and confident of the development and the exceptional opportunities we have in our seas, I feel responsible for promoting these platforms, which will effectively serve to generate policies from all sectors.”

U.S. HOUSE OCEANS CAUCUS CO-CHAIRS INTRODUCE LEGISLATION TO ADDRESS MARINE DEBRIS

Co-Chair of the House Oceans Caucus, Representative Don Young of Alaska, introduced H.R. 2748 – To reauthorize and amend the Marine Debris Act to promote international action to reduce marine debris, and for other purposes.

Representative Suzanne Bonamici (House Oceans Caucus Co-Chair) and other members of the House Oceans Caucus are among original cosponsors.

This is a companion bill to the one introduced earlier this year by Senators Sullivan, Whitehouse, Peters, and Murkowski, Co-Chairs of the Senate Oceans Caucus.

NAMIBIAN PRESIDENT SIGNS CAUCUS-BACKED BILL INTO LAW TO INCREASE PENALTIES FOR WILDLIFE CRIME

President Hage Geingob signed into law the Nature Conservation Amendment Act, which significantly increases penalties for wildlife crime. The Act, unanimously passed by the Namibian parliament, raises fines for rhino and elephant poachers from the current maximum of N$200,000 to N$25 million, and increases the fines for illegal possession of protected species from the current N$20,000 to N$10 million and imprisonment of five to ten years.

The Namibian Conservation Parliamentary Caucus (NACOPAC) supported the development of political will and expert input for the law through a series of workshops and briefings focused on illegal wildlife trafficking and managing human-wildlife conflict. NACOPAC is an all-party caucus of Namibian parliamentarians committed to strengthening conservation for sustainable development.

IT HAS BEEN ESTIMATED THAT UP TO 12.7 MILLION METRIC TONS OF WASTE ENTERED THE OCEAN IN 2012.

IN 2016, 135 ELEPHANT TUSKS AND PIECES AND 36 RHINO HORN WERE SEIZED BY NAMIBIAN AUTHORITIES.
INTERPRETATION OF COLOMBIA’S NATURAL PARKS TO HIGHLIGHT THEIR IMPORTANCE

With the objective of continuing to plan visitor interpretation and interaction with Colombia’s natural parks, ICCF’s International Conservation Corps conducted its third field mission in Tayrona National Park, from May 2-16, in conjunction with Parques Naturales Nacionales (from the local and the national levels) and the National Park Service of the United States.

The project includes the planning of two important park elements: land utilization and visitor interpretation. Land architects visited the site, bringing technical support with initial recommendations to improve visitor experiences and yield improved use of the current infrastructure of the park, including identifying the most appropriate places for the flow of visitors and location of services such as bathrooms, water fountains, and others.

The project also included a week-long interpretive planning workshop, including two days with forty representatives from local communities involved in the park such as indigenous groups, ecotourism experts in the community, and public relations representatives for the park. The workshop sought to define concepts such as interpretation, education, information, and orientation; develop the interpretive mark; define and prioritize interpretive services; and establish steps to continue the construction of interpretive planning of Tayrona Park.

The International Conservation Corps team is comprised of several retired experts from the U.S. National Park Service: Sam Vaughn, who served as Executive Director of Interpretation Planning; Carolyn Richard, who served as Executive Director of Interpretation for Carlsbad Caverns, National Mall and Memorial, and Grand Teton National Parks; and Ellis Richard, who served as Executive Director of Interpretation for Grand Canyon National Park and Superintendent of Guadalupe Mountains National Park. This is a team with great knowledge and experience in interpretation planning, visitor center management relating to interpretation and design of activities, development of printed materials, and environmental education, in addition to others.
Q: How does Mozambique’s ecotourism impact natural wealth and rural communities? What have been the benefits of this industry, and what challenges remain?

A: Mozambique looks at tourism as an income earner, a way of promoting the country through tourists who visit the country. But also, the country looks at tourism as something that should benefit the communities of the country, and we want to make sure that, as we develop, that we do not overuse the natural resources of the country.

So, ecotourism is essential in the development tourism industry in Mozambique, and we have plans, programs, strategies to develop ecotourism, to have community participation in tourism development, in cultural tourism. The ecotourists today look for more than just the beauty of the country; they want to know more about the communities: how they live, their past, present, the cultural practices, folklore, dances, music, all of those things.

JOEL MANBY, CEO OF SEAWORLD PARKS & ENTERTAINMENT, SPEAKS AT OCF RECEPTION IN NEW YORK ON JUNE 7TH
This has been a very productive quarter that has highlighted, in particular, The ICCF Group’s successful work in Latin America. We were honored to host the President of Colombia in Washington to discuss conservation initiatives, challenges, and successes in his country. Over the past several years, we’ve built a close working relationship with the government of Colombia. ICCF Colombia supports the Colombian Conservation Caucus (CCC) and brings together government, business, and NGO stakeholders to advance the work of the caucus. The CCC was among the first parliamentary conservation caucuses that The ICCF Group has helped to establish, and we are happy to announce that, in April, ICCF Colombia worked with members of the Colombian Congress to launch the Colombia Oceans Caucus (COC).

On the ground, The ICCF Group, through our International Conservation Corps, is supporting the National Parks of Colombia (PNN). Over the past few months, International Conservation Corps team members have conducted a series of missions to Tayrona National Park, one of Colombia’s most popular for tourism, working with the PNN and local communities to enable park personnel to better convey the park’s rich natural heritage to its visitors. Members of the newly established Colombia Oceans Caucus visited the park in June to see first-hand the economic value of the park and to get a sense of the challenges facing the park’s coastal ecosystems.

Over the past year, The ICCF Group has helped to build nonpartisan conservation caucuses in Mexico and Peru, the latter of which we worked with members of the Peruvian Congress to launch in April. We are proud of our work in Colombia and are excited about the road that lies ahead working with newly formed caucuses in the region. We remain grateful to all of our partners who make the continued success and growth of our work possible around the globe.

Best Wishes,

John B. Gantt, Jr.
President, ICCF U.S.
